“ Working with you at JFL was a pleasure and all the jokes we shared will stay with me. You was always ready to work and made sure you had fun doing it especially when it came to the patients you made sure they didn't feel like it was just a job. You will be missed tremendously!

“ He was my roommate in Army OCS. We bonded close due to our caribbean background. We joked often about our cultures and reminisced on our upbringing. We taught each other on life, duty & our quest to be better humans. Whenever he need someone to assist him on anything; I would answer the call to join him & he would do the same for me. If I ever need someone to join me in a foxhole, it would be him. May you join the Lord embrace, I'll see you when I see you brother.Dave

“ A Tribute to LT Kasmus Patrick Today, I say goodbye to one of the brightest lights I've ever had the honor of walking alongside: LT Kasmus Patrick. To say I'm heartbroken is an understatement. He wasn't just my coworker; he was my friend-a true confidant and guiding light. Kasmus had this way of carrying himself that demanded respect but also radiated warmth. He was outspoken, unshaken by negativity, and always unapologetically himself. When others doubted or wavered, he stood firm, a living testament to perseverance. He worked tirelessly to earn his commission, refusing to let anything or anyone dim his ambition. We crossed paths at OCS, and I'll never forget how he lifted me up when the weight felt unbearable. He didn't just encourage me to push forward-he believed in me, sometimes more than I believed in myself. "Keep going," he'd say, "because one day, you're going to get there. And when you do, you'll be unstoppable." Kasmus wasn't just a role model; he was a force of nature who never hesitated to lend a hand to anyone in need. He had the rare ability to see people for who they truly were, and for those lucky enough to truly know him, he was pure gold. The world feels dimmer without him, but I promise, Kasmus-I'll keep working hard to commission, just like you always encouraged me to. I'll carry your unwavering spirit, your kindness, and your determination with me every step of the way. You've left behind a legacy of resilience, compassion, and courage. Rest easy, my friend, knowing that you've inspired so many, and your light will keep shining through the lives you touched. You'll forever be missed, but never forgotten.
